and Markum, the bough, cracked up on the shooting party. "Ah! that's right!" exclaimed Coverdale, who appeared suddenly to have regained his good temper—"tie the pony up to a tree and come here. Hazlehurst, you will pick me up when I require it, and Markum will do the same kind office by Mr. Styles, and I don't intend him to have a sincere either," he added, sotto voce.

"You don't mean seriously, you're going to fight him?" inquired Hazlehurst.

"Indeed I do, and what's more, nobody shall prevent me, unless he shows the white feather, was the positive answer.

"But—but you'll get knocked about so, besides the brute's a bigger man than you, and as strong as an elephant—suppose he should injure you?" remonstrated Hazlehurst.

"He may if he can," was the confident reply; "why, Arthur, you're as nervous as a girl, this is not the first time you've seen me use my fists, and I've taken lessons of Bert Caut since the old Eton days."

"Go in and win, then, if you will make a fool of yourself," rejoined Hazlehurst moodily, as he helped his friend to divest himself of his shooting jacket and waistcoat.

"Now, Mr. Styles, I am at your service," remarked Coverdale, addressing his antagonist politely.

"Do you mean fighting then, do you?" inquired Styles, half incredulously.

"I mean to try and give you the thrashing you promised me," was the reply."

"And if you do, I'll promise never to shoot another rabbit without your permission; but if I'm best man, blessed if I don't smash 'em where and when I like," was the rejoinder.

"It's a bargain," returned Coverdale, "so now come on." As his antagonist bared his brawny arms and muscular throat, Harry felt that if his skill were at all commensurate with his strength, he had cut himself out a somewhat troublesome task, and he began to own, in his secret soul, that Hazlehurst was right, and he was about to do a very foolish thing. However, he had great confidence in his own skill and activity, and to these qualities did he trust to relieve him from his difficulties. If those amiable philanthropists, who-E ranks, once numbering a large majority of the aristocracy and gentry of the land, have as civilization has spread, grown "small by degrees and beautifully less" (we allude to the "Patrons of the Ring")—if these humane and enlightened individuals expect a detailed account, a la Bell's Life, of the "funning mill" between Corerdale Cove and the Stylish Farmer, they must be doomed to the pangs of disappointment; for unfortunately neither our taste nor our talent lies in that direction. Suffice it then to relate, that Mr. Styles's science proving an article of the very roughest country manufacture, while his antagonist went to work with the skill and composure of a finished artist, Coverdale soon perceived that he had only to stop, or avoid, his opponent's blows, to keep cool, and to bide his time, in order to ensure an easy victory—and the event justified his expectations. After six rounds, in which the farmer had acquired two beautiful black eyes, and had the operation of "tapping his claret," performed for him with equal promptitude and dexterity, while Coverdale had not got a scratch, time was called, and the seventh round commenced. Styles, smarting from the punishment he had received, and irritated to the highest degree by his adversary's superior skill and coolness, rushed on so furiously and hailed such a shower of blows upon his opponent, that Coverdale found it would be impossible entirely to ward them off, and not wishing to be disfigured by a black eye or flattened nose, was forced to exert himself in real earnest to endeavor to bring the battle to a conclusion; watching his opportunity, therefore, he drew back, stopped a terrific hit cleverly with his left hand, and then flinging out his right arm straight from the shoulder, and bounding forward at the same moment, he struck his antagonist a crushing blow, which, catching him full on the side of the head, sent him down like a shot.

"That has settle the business, I expect," observed Hazlehurst, sententiously, as, breathless and with bleeding knuckles, his friend seated himself on his extended knees—"he had had nearly enough before, and he has got rather too much now. You hit him an awful crack!"

"It was his own fault," returned Coverdale. "I did not want to hurt the man if he would have fought quietly, and like a civilized Christian, instead of a raging lunatic—but he's only stunned—see, he's reviving already. Confound the fellow, his head is as hard as a cannon ball, to which fact my knuckles bear witness." So saying, Coverdale rose, and, resuming his coat and waistcoat, approached his fallen foe, who with his head leaning against Markum's was staring vacantly at the sky.

"He's as unconscionable as a hinsant,

Mr. Coverdale, sir; you've been and knocked his hinsants slap out of him, which only serves him right, and is what all poachers 'andsomely deserve," remarked the game keeper cheerfully.

"I know what's the trouble to cure him," exclaims Hazlehurst, producing a pocket knife, and applying it to the fin of the tranquillized Styles. At first the patient seemed inclined to resist; but as soon as he tasted the flavor of the contents of the pocket knife, he raised his hand, and pushing aside Hazlehurst's fingers, druked it to the bottom.

MONDAY, MAY 23, 1859.

REPUBLICAN NOMINATION.
FOR REPRESENTATIVE TO CONGRESS;

EASTERN DISTRICT,

THOMAS DAVIS,

OF NORTH PROVIDENCE.

CARRIER WANTED.—A good, steady young man, or lad, find employment on the "Down Town Route" of the DAILY NEWS, by applying at THIS OFFICE.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

A letter received by the Postmaster of this city yesterday from the Postmaster at Beeby's Point, Cape May County, N. J., dated May 18th, inst., states that on the 16th instant, the dead body of a man, in a boat, came ashore at that point. It was thought the man perished from exposure and exhaustion. He was of light complexion, blue eyes, hair somewhat grey, with a moustache. The man was apparently about 40 or 45 years of age, and was dressed in blue pants, dark monkey jacket, and show; had no hat on. The man was buried in the Methodist church yard at that place, on the 17th inst. The boat is 14 feet keel, (color not stated,) clinch work, copper fastened, and sharp at both ends. There were two chisels in the boat, marked "W. P." on the handles. It was supposed the boat belonged to Block Island, as she resembled the boats in use by the plots and fishermen of that island.

CHANGE IN BUSINESS.—We notice that Mr. James B. Smith, a Newport boy, succeeds in business, the coming season, Mr. Henry D. Deblou, at the United States Autotype Gallery, No. 3 Dubois Block, Touro Street, near the Atlantic House. Mr. Smith is an experienced artist, having, we understand, been engaged in the Daguerreotype and Autotype business the last nine years. He certainly executes very truthful and well finished pictures, and puts forth every effort to please and give satisfaction. His prices range from twenty cents, upwards.

Machine Tools.

TIME, Saturday, P. M.

Joans, start up that new machine of ours; let's see how it works. There, turn slow, till we get the hang of it:

Bright summer's days are close at hand,
The sun shines bright o'er all the land—

Hold on! hold on! That won't do; we haven't seen the sun for a week. Where you going to find your sunshine in a northeast rain storm? Now try again.

The fog hangs heavy o'er the town,
The rain is coming "right straight down,

Our streets are all afloat.

'Tis hardly fit to go abroad,

Even though your feet should be well shod,

Except you take a boat.

That's better—go ahead.

Ours wears the look of a deserted town;

Look out on Thames Street up and down,

And see if 't is not so:

'Cept here and there a plodding crit,

That looks as though he's only fit

To grace a monkey show.

That's first rate, except the last line. Comparing the "solid men" of Newport to monkeys, is rather a stretch of propriety, and must be rebuked. Go ahead again.

The ladies, who, when the sun is bright,

Are all abroad like orbs of light,

Are strangely scarce to-day;

You scarce will see one in an hour,

And when you do, they look so sombre—

Say, what's the matter, pray?

This wretched weather, I tell you,

Is making every thing look blue,

Except the skies above;

Such weather should indict us

Before the Court of Common Pleas,

Its "equity" to prove.

With fog and rains, and flooded drains,

Our bones consumed with aches and pains,

Now what are we to do?

To "grin and bear it," I suppose,

Just like the man with worn-ed toes,

With better days in view.

Electron day is close at hand,

No doubt the reader understands,

With all its store of fun,

To chase away the blues, and cheer

The souls of men with cakes and beer—

And—I rather guess I'm done.

There, Joans, you may put away the machine. It will answer very well, when it gets in working order.

We learn that the steamer Chickopee is to be placed on the route between this city and E. Greenwich the coming season, commencing her trip on the first day of June.

Medical men advanced in life assure me, that the effect of using intoxicating liquors now, is much more fatal to health and life than thirty years since.

Then, liquors were comparatively pure. The alcohol in them was usually the only ingredient that the constitution had to contend with, and then a habitual drinker, if he lived so long, did not become a known drunkard under twenty years; but now it frequently occurs that the same amount of habitual drinking produces diseases and intemperance in three years.

In these, these medical gentlemen attribute to the presence of other poisons than the poison of alcohol in the intoxicating liquors used by the people in such quantities.—E. C. DELAWAN.

I mean to abandon my habits of life," said a dissipated gentleman. "Are you sure, sir, they are not abandoned enough already?" asked his friend.

Correspondence of the News.

Woburn, R. I.

Mr. Morton:—The weather has at last cleared up, and we are enjoying the luxury of a little warmth, the birds appear to appreciate the change, for the woods are rendered melodious by the voices of various forms, and the sounds of busy labor re-echo from surrounding fields. Many of the inspirations of the poets are drawn from scenes like this, and surely it should stimulate a scribbler as he sits down to have a short chat with your readers. But stop! before I go farther, perhaps it would be as well to turn around and make my obeisance there, (confidentially, Mr. Editor) was not that pretty well done? who are weekly entertained by your valuable sheet. I have received a few numbers and can say with sincerity, that it is one of the most interesting of my many periodicals—and I hope the enterprise will be sustained as I trust it will be, by an intelligent community, such as your city produces. We are a little one side of the usual thoroughfares, and do not hold quite so conspicuous a place upon the map as some of our neighbors, yet Wakefield may be classed among the villages that are "some," and perhaps more. Only but think, we had a circus [Nixon & Co.] here last Wednesday in the rain, and although it poured in torrents, and the tent was nearly flooded with water, yet it passed off with eclat and men, women and children all rushed pell-mell, through mud and slop—papas carrying the little ones, and kind mamas administering to their necessities, all to behold the great show. The tent was crowded in the afternoon, but in the evening the audience was smaller. A "Nigger" performance, as usual; accompanied it, forming a sort of Eolian attachment, to the brassy music of its German band. One of the lady performers, a rider in the concern, had a child with her, at the hotel while the tender (?) mother entered (or, contrived) to the gaping multitude in the rainy tent! her husband also was a rider and one of the stars of the company. They came here from Brand's Iron Works, where they had a drunken frolic, at least some of them. One man fell from the wagon and was run over: his life was despaired of at last accounts.

I have not said any thing about Wakefield, but I have already written more than I intended to, and more than you will wish I had probably. So I must reserve the rest until some future time. Yours truly,

Wakefield, May 18. S. PUNKINS.

Sodom Plains, R. I.

MR. EDITOR:—On looking over the last number of the Weekly News I was somewhat pleased to find an article from your Dorrville correspondent, giving a description of that formerly patriotic village.—Had he taken a look inside the Doctor's establishment, he would have seen—not the Amazons of '42,—but an army still more dangerous,—to one as fond of pretty faces as our friend Peleg. I was also pleased to see a short article from Little Compton. This is, I believe, the first I have seen from Little Compton, in the way of correspondence.

I should have liked it better had the letter been a little longer, but then, we can expect but little if there is only a little to write.

The old gentleman from down below has been doing quite a thriving business over this way during the past week. On Monday last, His Majesty's troops encamped in Westerly, where they gave an exhibition of their skill, in demoralizing the minds of the youth, and, in some cases, it is feared, those of more mature years.—The company consisted of horses, snakes, monkeys and human beings, all seeming bent on perverting Nature's laws. On Tuesday they had another exhibition at Brand's Iron Works.

I see by their advertisements, that they intend to visit all the principal places in the State. I would not wish to be understood as finding fault with reasonable amusements, or innocent recreation; but when those amusements are worse than nothing, as far as they affect our happiness, and cannot be obtained, but at the expense of human life, it is well to look before we leap. Yours truly,

MAY 16, 1859. THE CANVASSER.

It is asserted that a man's finger nails grow their complete length in four months and a half. A man living seventy years renews his nails 180 times. Allowing each nail to be half an inch long, he has grown seven feet and nine inches of finger nail, on each finger, and on fingers and thumbs an aggregate of 77 feet and 6 inches.

A young man, while undergoing an examination, for the purpose of being admitted to the bar, was asked, "What were the constitutional requirements which render a man eligible to the office of the President of the United States?" He answered, "He must be thirty-five years old, and a good Democrat."

A steamship for the Havana and New Orleans Steamship Company, is to be launched in Philadelphia on Wednesday. She is 160 feet long, 26 feet beam, and about 600 tons burthen.
